“ My friend has gone to better place. Charles was a true friend. We worked together. He was often in my face about my poor choices. Like a father would. He saw things in me, that he saw in the mirror. A person who had allot to offer. But needed a little help. He did just that. He gave his heart, to everything and everyone. Not a push over, but a man of reason. I lost my own brother and Charles was there. He would never offer his help until I had tried to do everything own my own. My friend would always call me out. When I closed the door on everything and everyone, he told me about myself. I disappointed him sometimes, but he never cease to amase me. I miss you Mr.Fischer. Your friend, James Brown.
