“ When we bought our home in Decatur in 1974, Eddie and Sherry Lester were our neighbors across the street.

As I remember it, the first time we drove up the beautiful, quiet cul-de-sac, Eddie was cooking dogs and burgers on a grill for, apparently, the whole neighborhood, on the little circle of green grass in the middle of the street that centered us all to each other.

I think we wanted the house before we even saw it.

We knew we wanted the neighborhood.

We watched the sweet Lester children go from little ones dancing in our picture window's reflection, to busy with school, to proud in college, to grown to works and loves of their own. The fact that they didn't run us out of the neighborhood with our house full of young people moving in and out and rock-n-roll live and yard full of cars tells you everything you need to know about this kind, tolerant, generous family. They were always there when we needed them. They were always there when we wanted them.

We so miss - we will always so miss - those who go Home before we do. Let us remember gladly now the Love that encircles us all and centers us to each other, here.

With all my Love and Prayers, and the Blessing of Gerry, Linda Steele

“ I last saw Eddie, for the first time in more than 25 years, about two years ago, at Golden Corral in Decatur. He looked well; not at all nearly 80 yrs. old. My daughter (his niece by marriage), and I were leaving a family gathering that afternoon. Eddie had always been a pleasure to converse with, during those times when I took my daughter to visit her Aunt Sherry, and he was still the same friendly person when I saw him, for the very last time, at Golden Corral. We had two things in common; our love for the Lord and our passion for writing...each of us with self- published books to our credit. When I learned of his passing, that same evening I went ahead and ordered two copies of his book "Master and Slaves," just in case it's no longer made available at some point. Eddie Lester was a delightful human being and I have no doubt that he will be sorely missed by his family, as well as by all who knew him. He is happy in the presence of the Lord now. May this truth be a great comfort to the loved ones he left behind...until you meet again.
