“ Francis and I have shared so much during our lives. When we were very young, we both spent time with my grandmother (his great grandmother). When we became young adults, our common love of music led us to concerts in a number of genres and parties all over the D.C. area. Neither of us had a car, so we just hitchhiked from party to party and concert to concert, playing our cowbells, gourds and a variety of other percussion instruments. We danced and laughed and danced and laughed and danced and laughed. When we grew older, Fran and I would talk for 4-5 hours about his inventions, and then send me a budget and 5 year projections to review. He was brilliant. And he was before his time.
