He was the neighbor that would mow the lawn at 7am on a Saturday while blasting Wu-Tang Clan through the garage speakers. Music was always on in his house. He was not afraid to sing at the top of his lungs or try to harmonize with his wife. He didn't always sound so good, but you couldn't tell him that. He enjoyed vacationing and was always planning the next trip. He took great pride in his flower and vegetable gardens.

He hosted weekly Sunday dinners for family and anyone that stopped by as soon as there was a crowd, karaoke would commence. He was a sports fanatic. He rooted for any NY team and would challenge in a debate with anyone who disagreed. He loved fishing and playing candy crush. He was a great listener and even a better problem solver.

He was helpful around the house. He didn't mind doing the laundry and would happily vacuum if asked. His favorite household chore was going grocery shopping. He never met a BOGO he didn't like. An acquaintance always became a friend. He was happy, kind, loved by many and will be missed.
