“ Time is so weird... When it's Monday, we rush so it can be Friday. When it's winter, we can't wait until its summer. But when it comes to death, we always regret that time moved so quickly. I hate death because I always end up regretting the amount of time I didn't spend with a person! Auntie Nit and I were so close when I was younger. When we visited Madear's house, secretly, she was the only one that I really came to sit and talk to. Over the years we grew distant and I didn't even come visit. 2015 is the last time I saw my aunt. I'm so ashamed. I always say that I will get better at this and I never do. I love my family, I just wish I saw fit to make time for them. God's still working on me.... now all I get is a message board that she will never read.

Auntie Nit thanks for the long talks, tight hugs, nonjudgmental looks and introducing me to the Moon Pie! I remember walking with you to get them like it was yesterday.... ❤️ Rest well Auntie!

“ I pray that God's Holy Spirit will provide peace to the family during this time. I hope that each and every one of you will be comforted by the memories that you have of her. Juanita was loved and will be missed tremendously. I often think of her love of books and how she treasured her library which is why I hold dear a cookbook that she shared with me years ago. It's like holding on to a little piece of her.
