“ All my life Uncle Kenny would never let me forget who I was as a child. He was there at the beginning and he will be there to the end. You know, for so long, I wished he would have just let me forget the nickname they gave me as a child.

But NOOOOO....

Every time I walked in the room the first thing I noticed, was his smile and shortly after that...

here it comes....

I would look at him eye to eye, his smile gets bigger and I murmur, "please don't say it!....

Then he says it!!! Still at the tender age of 46, he still found a way to make me smile and cringe with fear of walking in the room and hearing that dreadful name being called....

Sometimes I wondered did he more pleasure in teasing me because he was pleased with the change and the person I became compared the meaning and the reason behind the nickname.

I will miss walking in the house and expecting to see his smile and hear him call me the name I dreaded hearing all my life. I have truly lived up to the name and will never live down it's meaning.
