

Lloyd Benjamin

February 14, 1955 - March 11, 2021

Lloyd Benjamin was born in Patrick Town, Manchester, Jamaica on February 14, 1955. He was a happy-go-lucky child who didn't have a care in the world. Lloyd was a very laid-back, calm young man who had an inquisitive mind. He loved to see how things worked and would dismantle so many household items and then with sheer genius put them back together. As a young adult he displayed a socially conscious mind and expressed his views through poetry and excellent oratory skills. He loved music and would spend hours upon hours listening to a myriad of different styles. Whether it was Reggae, Rhythm & Blues, or Country, Lloyd found a melody that serenaded his soul. He won everyone's heart with his jovial spirit and kindness. Due to his strong problem-solving ability, Lloyd was encouraged to pursue a course in electrical technology in Spanish Town. While in the city he worked at the Office of the Registrar of Cooperative Societies. When he left the city, he began helping his mother with the management of the family business after the sudden death of his father. Concurrently he worked at Jamaica Public Service (JPS) before migrating to the United States of America. On May 26, 1984 Lloyd married the love of his life, Pauline. Eventually Lloyd and his family relocated to Atlanta, Ga. Lloyd fulfilled his entrepreneurial dreams when he began L. Benjamin Trucking. He worked diligently every day and was blessed to enjoy the rewards of his profession. He is survived by his wife Pauline, his children, Jodyann, Free, and Shantel, five grandchildren, sisters, brothers, nieces, nephews, and many, many friends.
