I am in deep dejection right now at the lose of Makeba. I always admired how she handled stress and always just seemed to be floating. She was always just so collected. I pray for strength during the family's loss as well as our interpreting community. It's just a shaking of the head and a re-evaluation of the heart and how I live my life. ~ Nayshunda O Burke (Atlanta, GA)

Prayers for comfort to Makeba's husband and child. As I know the pain of losing both a child and a sister, I pray mightily for Ella and Talea. Though this journey is difficult, lean not on your understanding, but on God, and He will see you through.

I was shock to hear her passing. She and I had our lunch hour together in the past and talked about our cooking food. We switched our recipes. We had a wonderful time at our lunch breaks. I am sad that she was gone. I am praying for her husband and little brother. Rest In Peace, Makeba! Hugs... ❤️🙏

“ Makeba, beautiful soul, you will be truly missed! I think back to when we first met in the the Speech Path grad program at AAMU. I knew I would have a friend for life! I will miss reminiscing about our journey through "the program" and sharing our professional/personal laughs, stories, and "life talks". As I shed tears I can also smile because I know that you achieved everything you set your mind to. The memory of your smile and incredible life will remain with us forever. Love you Keba!!

“ Makeba was the first interpreter I met when I moved to the area. She was so implemental in my life and my interpreting career. She was the link God knew I needed to help me get on my way. She always had a smile for me and great information. I am without words now and I pray for her family and the community she created that grieves for her now. Thank you for sharing her with me. I am truly hurt as she was just the best.

“ Makeba you are missed beyond words. The laughter outweighs the tears as think back on our early speech pathology days on "the Hill." Our conversations about the life we wanted to live are forever in my heart. I take comfort in knowing your dreams came true. Rest in Heavenly peace, gorgeous! Love you.
