“ When Marley was about two years old, she came to church with her grandmother, Emma, who serves as a mother on the motherboard at the church. As Mother Emma sat on the pew alongside the other elder mothers, she had little Marley sitting with her. As the church service progressed, Marley joyfully clapped and sang along with the choir. When the Reverend delivered his sermon, the congregation responded with "Amen" in agreement with the word being preached. One elder mother in particular, Mother Collins, would express her agreement by saying, "Yes, LORD." Marley, being the beautiful, smart, and impressionable little girl that she was, began to echo Mother Collins in the exact same manner—"Yes, LORD." Her grandmother, Emma, tried to gently shush her, hoping to prevent Marley from appearing as though she were mocking Mother Collins. But determined little Marley boldly walked over, stood next to Mother Collins, leaned against her lap, and continued to repeat after her.

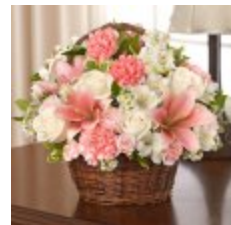

Mother Collins enjoyed it. And I thought it was absolutely adorable that this beautiful little girl had such "Holy Boldness." From that moment on, I called her my little Miss "Yes, LORD."

Rest well in the realms of eternity, my sweet little Miss Yes, LORD.
