“ This picture captures one of the fondest memories I have of Mike and I, as kids. We played baseball at Dresden Park and were blessed to be on the same team together.

As you can see, we were the little league ‘Atlanta Braves’, and we really thought we were just like the pro team too! That year, we were park champions with an undefeated record. Talk about a great time! Those were some of the best moments of our lives and they stuck with us as we grew older.

Mike was a sports enthusiast and was a home team representer to the fullest! You couldn’t tell him anything about his Georgia Bulldogs, Atlanta Braves, Atlanta Hawks or the Atlanta Falcons.

Unfortunately, my intimate knowledge of who Mike was right before his passing allude me. Thanks to social media, we didn’t lose touch with one another, but the rigors of fighting to have something in life did place us out of touch; and I regret that.

The lesson that this family death is teaching me, is that family members should be a bit more intentional about keeping up with one another. Not for any selfish pursuits, but for the purpose of maintaining genuine relationship. The kind that expresses a mutual concern for one another’s growth, maturity, progress, accomplishments, support, and well-being.

Tell the people you care about how you feel more often than not, because when they’re gone, they’re gone.

I’m sending prayers of comfort and peace to his wife and children, and I’m apologetic that this occasion is the first time any of them have ever heard from me.

Rest well Mike. Your legacy lives on! ❤️👊🙏
