“ I met Napoleon when I was a neophyte at the church in 1998.

*I remember when he was traveling overseas for the military.
He said he would find his future wife overseas.*

He found her, married her and then started a beautiful family.

We agreed and disagreed about a few things over the 26 years but we still remained very good friends.

*We helped each other over the years.
I can easily say Napoleon was a great friend.*

I will miss him.

“ Napoleon is my cousin and I'm going to miss him dearly, I'm going to miss how we try to beat each other saying something crazy before the other can say hello. He always got me first, when he called me before I can say a word, he goes what's up ugly. This was so funny until I got him back but this time I heard Napoleon laugh so loud and hard when I said, what's up monkey. We both had the laugh of our entire life. This is what I want to remember because we were all close cousins growing up which I was older than him we always enjoyed each other's company. RIP Napoleans bye for now, cousin Diedra Spencer

I knew Napoleon from the chemo clinic. We struck up a conversation one day, and then an unlikely friendship ensued. We were from different backgrounds but had some commonalities - mainly a battle with cancer and a love for toys. He sent me pics of his trucks, motorcycles, cars. I sent him pics of my boat and guitars. But mostly we made a regular connection with each other and cared about the wellness of the other. I'm missing his presence deeply now but know that I will meet him again down the road. Love you, bruh.
