“ It is hard to find words to express one’s self in moments like these. But please know Aunt Ven that you are not alone, and I hope you feel all the love coming from us in Jamaica. From the short moments I spent with your husband, it was clear that he was deeply interested in knowing more about people. It was beyond the obligatory half-baked smiles and emotionless greetings that we now become accustomed to. We should emulate Mr Braxton’s genuineness and the desire to spend quality times with those we meet - even if the moments are brief.

Aunt Ven, losing someone so dear to you is never easy. Please feel our heartfelt love radiating to you as we lift you up in prayer. As you gather to honour your husband's life and memory, please find strength in the love that surrounds you. Cherish the beautiful memories shared and the legacy he left behind. Know that you are in our thoughts as you navigate this profound loss.

“ Like a brave soldier, Uncle Rick fought long and hard for years. He was brave enough to face his fears and come to Jamaica more than once. Hats off to you!

You have left us a lesson in bravery and resilience 🙏. Now it is time to rest from your battles.

Be comforted Auntie Ven. You have wonders in your caregiving 🙌

“ Mr Braxton, AKA Rick, was a clam and caring man of a few words. Whenever I went to visit my aunt, he would always check in to see how the girls are doing. His mannerism spoke volumes about his character. Rick will be missed dearly and may his memories lives on.
