

SaLandria Trenise Brown

November 2, 1970 - May 26, 2021

SaLandria (Sal) Trenise Brown was born in Boston MA. on November 2, 1970 to Lessie Brown and the late Cleo James. Many of Sal's most special moments was spent side by side with her mom from the time of her birth until her transition to her heavenly Father. Sal and her mom were very close, and they often spent time slumbering in bed watching TV and going out for lobster dinners.

Sal spent her early years of schooling in Dorchester, MA. at the Seventh Day Adventist School. She then went to school in Concord, Ma. and graduated from Concord-Carlisle in 1989. Sal was very active and loved sports. She began honing her skills in basketball in high school and continued to keep her skills sharp, sharp enough to beat her adult children playing basketball. While in high school she excelled outside of the classroom and was selected to be part of both Project Reach and INROADS, college and career readiness talent search programs. Sal was spiritually grounded at a young age and attended Morning Star Baptist Church in Mattapan, MA. with her mom. During this time, she also built a strong bond of sisterhood with her childhood friends Amy (Barros) Wright, Celena (Terry) Matlock, and Deidra (Neville) Greenwood, and sister-cousins Alandra "Trecey" (Shaw) Parker and Angela (Allen) Payne. Sal's calm spirit, non-judgmental demeanor, and witty sense of humor made her the perfect sister-friend.

Sal earned her Bachelor of Arts in Accounting from Babson College in Wellesley, MA. in 1993. In college she was a member of Babson's Dance Ensemble.

After college, Sal had her heart set on warmer climates and moved to Atlanta, GA. in 1995. Here she continued to attend church and build upon Christian values and her relationship with Christ. Sal had a career highlighted with achievements of success. More importantly through her career, she gained an inner-circle of friends whose dear relationships extended beyond the workplace. These special friends include Michelle Curney Willis, Yolanda Patterson, Danielle Lowe, and Sonseeahray Thorton. Most recently Sal worked at The Shepherd Center where she found another workplace family.

If there were ever a motto Sal lived by it was "family first". She earned the favored title of "mom" in 1998 when she gave birth to her first born, Kiara, and over the next four years Curtis and Khaya followed. Her children were her pride and joy. Everything Sal did was for her children and in their best interest, all the way to the point of her transition.

Sal's marriage to Troy McMorris brought her to Gwinnett County and finally to her home in Loganville, GA. where she transitioned to heaven with her mother and children by her side.

Left to remember and celebrate her life are her mother Lessie Brown; three children – Kiara Brown, Curtis Smith, and Khaya Smith; her granddaughter Niyelle Allen; brother Matthew Holloway; special aunts Minister Mae Allen and Irma Ford; uncles – Peter Karl James and Paul Ford; sister-cousins – Alandra "Trecey" (Shaw) Parker and Angela (Allen) Payne; sister-friends – Amy (Barros) Wright, Celena (Terry) Matlock, Deidra (Neville) Greenwood; special friends – Michelle Curney Willis, Sonseeahray Thorton, Yolanda Patterson, and Danielle Lowe; fur baby – Honey; and a host of loving cousins, nieces, nephews, and other relatives and friends.

“ I've known Salandria since she was a very young girl. She was beautiful inside as she was beautiful on the outside. Myself and my entire family loved this young lady, I as a sister and my parents as a daughter. We didn't want her to move away but we understood. I'm heartbroken that she's been called home so young. Salandria, may you rest in paradise for all eternity, I love you. Lynne M. Pettaway Mattapan, MA.
