“ I respected your family wishes and stayed away but you still my best friend YG I love you and miss you so much. I don't know what happened but you fought for so long and I can't help but to sit here and cry it's our birthday month twin we supposed to be lit together right now I wish I could see you one more time. You were my best friend in real life I could always come to you for anything and everything why you leave me so soon like this. Everyday was a surprise being in your life was a blessing you gave me strength from being so strong hope , joy , and brought life to every party I miss you so much we had so much in common but it was so much more deeper than what people said or thought I'm still in denial but I think it's starting to feel real because I can't come see you no more watch over me and mia because she keep asking about you but I don't know what to say 💙

“ Dear cousin, my favorite memory of you was when I attended your high school graduation in 2010. I was so happy and grateful to finally support you 💖 I loved to see you with your father, shining brightly as you walked across the stage in your your royal purple gown. I will always cherish your kindness and your great sense of humor. Tell Aunty Monica and your sister Sierra that I love her and miss them both. I have all three of you as my guardian angels. Rest in peace big cuz 🙌 Love Raki and the Stokely Family 🕊

Shakeel...from Day 1 you've always been in a Class of your own...from deciding to enter this world at your house (713 Coral way)...to being a toddler Singing us gospel spirituals with more power and praise than any adult. One of my 1st babies, a Loving, kind Soul. Faced with many adversities you battled life with your head held high and kept that gorgeous smile shining!! Sad you are not here in the physical, however the thought of you reuniting with your Mommy and Lil Sis (Cee Cee) brings a tiny bit of comfort and Peace. May you Rest in Eternal Paradise...Sending Love and Prayers to all my Family and his friends. Until we meet again Sweetheart...keep smilin and singin...I Love you!!!
