Remembering one our late nights out in search for food, someone suggested we stop at Doug's place for a burger. They told Sylvia and me to go in and browse around. Cloudy glass cases with cheap tarnished jewelry with a inch of dust covering everything. Slyvia with a twinkle in her eyes and a serious face directed my attention to a huge mound of green hamburger sitting on a dusty table. We burst into laughter and could not stop. Needless to say we did not get our burger but we laughed about it for years. Gone but never forgotten. Rest in peace dear Slyvia.
